THE ONE-PRICE CLOTHIER.

WE ARE WELL FIXED ON SKIRTS AND WAISTS
The history of the store never showed as good a line as we show now. They are literally full of style with all the wearing qualities of any season and so low that the most conservative buyer cannot help buying. Starting a fine waist at 75 cents and increasing it three times will get the very best in the store, and so with the skirt deal, they are so cheap that you wouldn't guess the price. We want to have you see them before you do your buying, and we are sure of your trade. Reading this will convince you of its truthfulness. Above is a cut of one style.

TO BUILD A BRICK DEPOT
Well Founded Rumor That the "Soo" Line Will Erect Substantial Depot Here This Coming Summer.
The "Soo" Line has been doing a splendid business at this point the past year and the attention of the officials has been drawn to the fact that a modern depot would look much better than the wooden structure which has so long answered the company's requirements.
There have been rumors off and on that the "Soo" would build at the foot of Davenport street and again it has been reported that a union depot would be erected someday in the triangle near where the lines of road cross. All these have been idle rumors however for the fact of the matter is that the new depot will be located on the site of the old which will be moved over on Thayer street. The new work will, it is thought, be begun early next summer and a solid substantial and modern brick building with all late improvements may be looked for.
When the new building is completed the present depot will be used for freight purposes. A requisition for a new warehouse track has already been sent in and has been favorably acted on by the officials. The business at the depot has so increased that another new man to handle freight has also been sent for.
It is quite likely that the division changes will be made by the 15th of this month. Pennington is practically dismantled now, everything having been moved away that pertained to a transfer of trains and crews. With the change will come two extra men who will be required in the office, also two car repairers. All the through freights will stop here in addition to the way freights which now tie up at this point. At present there are from six to eight through freight trains here daily east and west and with the natural increase in business which is expected at this time of the year there will be from 12 to 15 regular trains through here daily, all of which will change crews at this point.
A new siding is being put in this week south of the depot for fuel purposes, the automatic engine supply chute requiring a good many cars of coal during the week. The new siding will permit of several cars of coal being sidetracked in close proximity to the source of supply.

COMPOUNDS COME TOGETHER.
East and West Bound "Soo" Line Freight Meet in Collision.
An east bound freight train pulled by engine No. 413 slightly exceeded the speed limit set for the "Soo" yard last Sunday morning and in rounding a curve at the east end of the yard crashed into a west bound freight which was being hauled by Engine No. 437. The pilots of both engines were smashed in by the force of impact and several cars were derailed. It took some time to clear the track as both of the engines were of the compound type. The west bound engine was enabled to proceed on its way with the train but engine No. 413 had to run light to the shops at Minneapolis for repairs, without the train.
Opens Store at Malvern.
Joseph Slifka, one of the Iowa parties who recently settled on land in the vicinity of Malvern has started a store at that place and already reports a good run of business considering the locality. There are 24 families now farming near Malvern and more are coming. Mr. Slifka has a farm of 120 acres of which 12 are cleared. He has four acres planted to oats which he says will run 55 bushels to the acre. He reports the prospects very favorable for a splendid potato crop. The North-Western Ry. Co. has established a regular station at Malvern.

HAVE AN EXCITING TIME
Boating Party on the "Wisconsin" Expires New and Novel Sensations—Heroes Discovered.
A party of young people of both sexes made a trip up the Wisconsin river last week in Luther Brown's houseboat "Mary Ann." The shades of evening had fallen when the boat left the wharf near the mill and as darkness settled down the conversation drifted toward occult matters and supernatural manifestations. At the time the boat reached the old shanties of the Pelican Boom Co. a condition of mind had been reached, especially among the girls, that was most favorable for the appearance of goblins, vampires and banshees.
As the air was chilly it was thought advisable to start a fire and accordingly two of the boys started off in the darkness for fuel. A hoarse guttural noise coming from a heap of brushwood was apparently unnoticed by the boys but it was heard by two of the young ladies and distorted visions of huge beasts soon filled their minds and the visions were disquieting.
A shriek of agony coming from one of the shanties but added to the uneasiness and the girls were unanimously in wishing to return home at once. At this time the heroic spirit that often lies dormant in man asserted itself and one of the boys started for the shanty to see what the trouble was.
He saw and at the same time became mixed up with a huge hairy animal very closely resembling a bear which occupied the building. His cries of anguish soon brought assistance from the boys, one of whom seized an ax and another a revolver. The ax was swung and the revolver fired and the beast driven away from its victim. The injured man was dragged from the shanty and carried to the camp fire. Sobs could be heard coming from the boat where the girls had congregated but the presence of the injured one soon caused pity to overbalance fear and his sufferings were tenderly ministered to.
In the meantime two of the boys had succeeded in dispatching the brute and its head was brought up to the fire and held up as a trophy.
Thomas Wood and John Wotring will explain what happened after the head was exhibited.

NEW HOTEL TO BE BUILT
Palst Brewing Company Will Erect $200,000 Brick Hotel at the River and Brown Street Corner.
Plans were received here yesterday by A. F. Schlemm, agent for the Palst Brewing Co., for a three story brick hotel building and basement which the company proposes to build on the land now occupied by the City Hotel. The plans were drawn by Henry Wildhagen, an Ashland architect, and comprised ten pages of blue print. The plans covered the building in detail and will be shown to contractors Frank Elby and Morris Melne who will figure on the cost of construction. It is also understood that Ashland contractors will figure on the work.
The site selected is a good one and the building will be fireproof and strictly modern in point of construction. The material used will be brick and brown stone from the quarries at Bayfield. The building will be 90 feet in length and 50 feet wide and will contain 35 sleeping rooms in addition to the parlors, of which there will be three, (one on each floor) together with toilet rooms and bath. There will be an up-to-date sanitary equipment installed and a steam plant will furnish the heat.
The new building will be a credit to the city and to the streets it will face upon.
The hotel when completed may be conducted by Sam. and Gus Johnson, the present proprietors of the City Hotel, but a definite statement as to this is not obtainable at present.

Cutting Down the Hill.
The big hill on Mercer street, west of the "Soo" depot is being improved in appearance by a crew of men under Street Commissioner Lawrence. It has been cut down fully 3 feet and the earth distributed where needed along the road down as far as the plant of the Rhinelander Iron Company. A covering of rich dirt will be put on the street after the work on the hill is finished and the property owners along that stretch of road will have reason to be proud of its general appearance before many days.

Edmonds at Milwaukee.
E. A. Edmonds of Oconto Falls spent yesterday at the Hotel Pfister on his way home from Chicago. "I will remove to Rhinelander in about three weeks," he said. "I am to be superintendent of the new paper mill being built there, which will be ready for business next February. It is to be equipped with the latest machinery and its capacity will be forty tons of finished paper and seventy tons of pulp daily. The mill in which my brother is interested in near Wausau is doing a large business, and I see no reason why the mill at Rhinelander should not equal it in all respects."
"Our new plant is to be backed by the Brown Bros. and other leading lumbermen, who see the great future of paper, now that lumber is becoming a product of the past in this state."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Ship Engine to Spirit Falls.
The Rhinelander Iron Co. has been doing considerable work on the engine rebuilding line of late. An engine which was taken from the burned mill of Mather Brothers at State Lake has been rebuilt and will be shipped this week to Joseph Nix, Spirit Falls, Wis., where it will furnish power for an excelsior mill which is being built there. Another large engine which had passed through a mill fire is now in shipping condition at the Iron Co.'s plant, it having been practically rebuilt entire.

James Blaisdell Dies.
Young Man Passes Away at the Home of His Parents on the South Side.
After suffering for many months with consumption, the dread wasting disease that holds out hope to those upon whom the seal of death has been set, James Blaisdell, a young man well known to our people, passed away at the home of his parents in the Sixth ward Sunday evening August 29.
The young man contracted the disease which led to his early taking away about three years ago while at work in the logging camps near Woodboro. He persistently fought against the ravages that come with the different stages and about three months ago returned from a long journey in New Mexico where he spent over a year in the hope that the southern climate would do for him what it had done for others before him. His case was too far advanced however and upon his return here even his friends could see that his days were short and that darkness would soon settle down.
The funeral was held at the home residence yesterday afternoon at 2:30. Rev. A. G. Wilson of the Congregational church officiated and was assisted in the last sad rites by Rev. F. C. Wolfe and Laraway Tent No. 17, K. O. T. M. of which the deceased was a member.
The dead man was 24 years of age and leaves besides a father and mother, three sisters and a brother. He carried $1,000 insurance in the Macabee order.

Many Attend Minnesota Fair.
Forty-seven tickets were sold at the "Soo" depot Sunday night to Rhinelanderites who are attending the big state fair at Hamlin Park this week, and enough more were purchased Monday to swell the total number to nearly sixty. Among those who are witnessing the fair are Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Parker, H. C. Dayton, F. H. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Jule DeMars, Mr. and Mrs. James Baker, Charles and Frank Calkins, Misses Hulda Ramphart, May O'Connor, Otto Krantz and Robert Olhoff.

Putting in Concrete Piers.
The "Soo" Line has a crew of men at work on the steel spans which is to bridge the tail race at the paper mill. The excavating that has been going on by the paper mill ditching crew has completely exposed the piling west of the bridge and the ends of the piles are hardly covered. Since arriving here the "Soo" men have been busy getting things in shape for the span. Several carloads of crushed stone have been unloaded south of the track and a large gasoline power concrete mixer has been installed with which the cement will be prepared for the piers of which there will be two.

Superior Mill Repairs Made Here.
It would not be generally supposed that mill men up in Superior would send to Rhinelander for repairs, but they do. The plant of the Rhinelander Iron Company has been the scene of considerable activity this week owing to a big batch of work which was turned in by H. J. Nye of the above city. The company bonded out a big steam feed cylinder the first of the week, the work being done in sections, two sections being bored daily.
The face of the two main drive wheels on the mogul logging engine of the Robbins Lumber Company was also turned off Monday.
The two big veneer cutters of the Wisconsin Veneer Co. will be fired up at the machine shop this week.

Wash-Slattery Wedding.
Attorney Jas. Wash of Cranston and Miss Frances Slattery of Eagle River were married last week in Wausau. The contracting parties are both well and favorably known in this city, especially the groom, who made his home here for nearly a year. He was last fall elected district attorney of Forest county on the Democratic ticket. Miss Slattery is one of Eagle River's most popular young ladies. The young couple will reside at Cranston. Their friends in Rhinelander extend congratulations.

Another Lecture Course.
Mrs. Charles Chabre is around this week seeing what the situation is for another one of the Lyceum Bureau's series of attractions. The lecture course last year was very enjoyable and the securing of another series for the coming winter depends largely upon what encouragement is offered in the way of a guarantee by those who take kindly to the proposition.

The Boston Herald makes an interesting summary of the material progress of the negro in the period since slavery was abolished. Forty years ago the negro had not a foot of land nor a roof over his head. Now there are 130,000 farms owned by negroes valued at $50,000,000; 150,000 homes owned by negroes valued at $25,000,000, and personal property valued at $105,000,000. So, starting from nothing, here is an accumulation of nearly $500,000,000.

What place Lord Salisbury will hold in history as compared with the other British statesmen of the nineteenth century time alone will tell, but that he will be accounted among the great prime ministers is not to be doubted. For nearly 50 years he had an important part in British diplomatic and governmental affairs, and for much of that time his was a figure of commanding eminence. Neither Pitt, Canning, Palmerston, Disraeli, nor Gladstone had a more marked personality, and the era of his political activity spans the most important epoch in modern times.

JURY CONVICTS
CALEB POWERS

Guilty of Complicity in the Murder of Gov. Goebel, of Kentucky.

HE IS GIVEN DEATH PENALTY

Result of Life Third Trial—Had Twice Previously Been Sentenced to Imprisonment for Life for Same Cause.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 31.—The third trial of ex-Secretary of State Caleb Powers for complicity in the murder of Gov. William Goebel, in January, 1900, closed shortly before noon Saturday, with the extreme penalty of hanging for the distinguished prisoner, who had been in the penitentiary for three years on life sentence. The verdict of the jury, "Guilty, and the punishment of death," was reported into court at 11:20 o'clock. Several hundred people crowded the court-room when the verdict was read, and the most intense silence prevailed. The jury was polled, and each man declared the verdict of guilt to be his finding. Powers sat unmoved, while his attorneys asked for time to make a motion for a new trial. Arthur Goebel broke down from the strain on hearing of the verdict of guilty. The jurors declined to state what occurred in the jury room. George Wyatt was foreman.

Arthur Goebel, the brother of the victim, is a prominent merchant at Cincinnati, and he spent his time and fortune for over three years in the prosecution of those accused of being in a conspiracy to kill his brother.

Powers has been convicted twice before, this being the third trial in which the jury brought in a verdict of guilty against him. On his previous trials, he escaped with a sentence of life imprisonment, as the evidence was not sufficiently strong against him to lead the jury to inflict the extreme penalty. All three of the trials were held at Georgetown, and in each of them he had the assistance of the most able lawyers who could be procured. Subscription lists were circulated in his interest by friends, and a sum of money was secured to defray the cost of his repeated trials and the investigation of the circumstances which preceded the killing of Gov. Goebel, in the interest of the defense. The last trial was distinguished by the fact that Powers addressed the jury in his own behalf, and in a long review of the case showed himself to be a very competent attorney, while his eloquent pleading for his life astounded those who had watched him carefully in the past trials of the case.

The British government offered the Jewish people, through Dr. Herzl, at the Zionist congress at Basel, Switzerland, a location in East Africa for the establishment of a Jewish autonomous settlement, to which the persecuted Jews, of Russia, Roumania, and other European countries, could emigrate. The proposition is receiving the attention of the Zionist leaders, and may be accepted, in which case it is expected that several thousand Jews will emigrate to this new promised land.

The committee of the New York Yacht club named to-day as the day for the next race. It was also decided to hold the races every day thereafter until the international contest is decided.

London, Aug. 31.—A cable dispatch was sent to Sir Thomas Lipton Saturday offering to guarantee the expenses if he will arrange for a series of five races between the Reliance and the Shamrock III. with their crews exchanged.

Sam Parks, convicted Union Representative, to Act White in Jail.

New York, Aug. 31.—At a meeting of the United Householders' and Bridgemen's union plans have been adopted which will enable Sam Parks to continue, from his place of confinement in Sing Sing prison, his work as business agent of the union, and particularly the resistance to signing the employers' arbitration agreement. The union voted confidence in Parks and decided to continue his salary of $15 a week regardless of his incarceration for extortion of money from employers.

The Sing Sing prison physician who has just examined Parks says he is suffering from tuberculosis and cannot live more than one year.

Clashed to Death.

Kansas City, Aug. 31.—Michael Hoodlin, a bartender, while sleeping in a chair in a saloon owned by his brother, John Hoodlin, at Sixth and Broadway, in the downtown district of this city, was beaten to death with a club early Sunday by some unknown persons, whose motive is supposed to have been robbery. The body was found in a chair tilted back against the wall, with the feet on another chair. A heavy table leg covered with blood lay near the body. Everyone in Hoodlin's place was drunk. Hoodlin's skull was crushed. His pockets had been rifled. Will Lee, a negro, has been arrested on suspicion.

Steamer Burned.

Detroit, Aug. 31.—The passenger steamer Pittsburg, running between Cleveland and Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and owned by the Georgian Bay Transportation company, of which W. J. Brown, of this city, is manager, burned to the water's edge at her dock in Sandwich, Ont., early Sunday. The crew escaped uninjured. Loss, $60,000; partially insured.

Will Get More Pay.

Bloomington, Ill., Aug. 31.—General Superintendent McGee, of the middle division of the Wabash railroad, has issued a bulletin that on September 1 pay would be increased for all trainmen and switchmen on Illinois lines of the road. Those in freight and yard service will be advanced 15 per cent, and those in passenger service 12 per cent.

Kilauea Active.

Honolulu, Aug. 31.—The volcano of Kilauea shows increased activity. Clouds of smoke are ascending from the crater.

World's Record Broken.

Lamar, Col., Aug. 31.—On Friday Dick Creaghe broke the world's record in a five-mile cowboy relay race, the distance being made in 9:22.5. The record was previously held by the Matson string and was made during the state fair at Pueblo in 1901.

Youngest Bank President.

New York, Aug. 31.—Carl Radolph Schultz, 27 years old, has been elected president of the Equitable national bank. He is the youngest president of a national bank in New York, and the youngest but one in the United States. Schultz was graduated from Yale at 21.

To Inspect Fair Grounds.

Chicago, Aug. 31.—Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw held a conference in Chicago Sunday with a committee of officers and directors of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition company and perfected arrangements for his inspection of the world's fair grounds at St. Louis on Tuesday next.

Will Meet Soon.

The Hague, Aug. 31.—It is officially announced that the arbitration court for the Venezuelan claims will assemble on the Reliance and Shamrock III. with their crews exchanged.

S. H. ALBAN ON BARDEEN

Rhineland's Veteran Attorney Eulogizes the Memory of Wisconsin's Able Jurist—Special Session Held.

At Wausau last Thursday night a session of the Marathon county circuit court was held in memory of Justice Charles V. Bardeen of the Supreme Court, who recently passed away.

The meeting was a most solemn one and was attended by nearly all of the late Justice's colleagues from the bar of the State and Judicial Circuit.

Among the speakers were the Hon. Neal Brown, Judge Silverthorn and Mr. B. Rosenberry of Wausau; A. H. Reid of Merrill; N. A. Colman, Eagle River, and Judge S. H. Alban of this city.

It would be a pleasure for us to print the addresses in full as all were worthy and indicative of the sterling worth of the man but space will not permit. We give below the address of Judge Alban of this city on "Bardeen, the lawyer."

In estimating the character of a cultured, well-developed, many-sided man, it is sometimes difficult to determine which is his best and most attractive side. And no greater tribute could be paid to any man than this, that many can sing his praises and each in a different tone. "Shakespearian" in the beautiful play, "The Tempest," in the immortal scene between Ferdinand and Miranda, puts into the mouth of the ardent lover these words:

"For several times have I loved several women, never any with so full a heart as I do thee. I have loved with the most desperate passion, and yet to the full, but you, O you, are perfect and complete, and created of every creature's best."

The immortal bard indulged here in a little poetic license, perhaps, but that speech, if truly and sincerely spoken, would prevail over the most obdurate heart, and at the same time convey an exalted estimate of character which not even vanity or egotism would dare to assume. On occasions like this the language of eulogy is sometimes over-taxed; for, when we think or speak of those whom we loved and who have crossed to the other shore, the past reveals only its sweetest memories and we speak as if we were in visions. Had the theme ascribed me been more personal in its nature, might have been well nigh impossible for me to express the sentiments of friendship, because Charles V. Bardeen was my friend, "faithful and just to me," but I am to speak of him, not with reference to personal feeling or relations, but as a lawyer.

There are lawyers and lawyers. Good, fair, able, sharp, successful and other lawyers. From among these designations I select the most honorable and most comprehensive. When we say of one of our brethren "he is a good lawyer," it is doubtful whether we mean all that is implied in the term. The word good has a wide range and many shades of meaning. When the Omnipotent pronounced each successive step in his creation "good," language could not characterize it as far, for the law of the act and the word were divine. Goodly can truly be said of a man down as good. It means that he is an exemplar of moral principle and character. A good lawyer may not be one excelling in all points, not necessarily pre-eminent in any, but he is the best, the soundest, the safest lawyer who is good in most things. I was a resident of Wausau when Charles V. Bardeen began here the practice of his profession. With but a small share of the world's abundant wealth, he nevertheless possessed unlimited capital in a good education, a clear head, invincible courage, incorruptible integrity and tireless industry. He was among the great number who must start in business life without advantage. "The world was all before him where he chose," but he must carve out his own fortune. He had well assimilated that lesson from the "Psalm of Life": "Learn to labor and to wait." He possessed in good degree that dignified patience which is one of the essential elements of success. The question whether a client was to come soon or late was one which he could not settle off hand, but he could order his life, so store his mind with knowledge, so fit and prepare himself for the arena of legal strife as to be ready for it when it came.

One of the first things that attracted my attention in our earlier acquaintance was his studiousness. His books were his constant companions. And this habit of assiduous legal study was retained through life. One day, after his success was assured, I went into his office and found him with a volume of Wisconsin reports in his hand. In reply to some remark of mine he informed me that he had started out some time before to review all the syllabi in the Wisconsin reports for the purpose of throwing in his memory of the decisions and showing me the number of the volume, he said, "I have gotten this far."

Well, the young lawyer continued for some time to practice patience and perseverance, but the reward came in due time as it always will come to those who have the staying and winning qualities. Clients sought his advice and aid and never talked to find the genuine articles. He possessed the faculty of inspiring confidence. The reasons for this were many. While he despised flattery and flattery, he never extended that courtesy which honest manhood yields to its kind. His face and manner were indicative of confidence. His clients felt assured that he knew the law and that his exposition would be conscientious. There are persons, born cynics, who try to be funny and who smile significantly when we speak of a lawyer's conscience. Jokes of this class are threadbare and are the prerogative of little men and little journals. The honest lawyer exists in goodly number. Charles V. Bardeen was a conspicuous example. When we speak of the honest lawyer we do not imply merely the pecuniary sense. Most lawyers are honest in dollars and cents. Among the legal fraternity embezzlement is a rare offense. But in this behalf honesty implies more than squaring financial accounts. One of the best tests of a lawyer's integrity is his conduct in giving advice. The temptation to advise a client is always strong. The dollar is a powerful magnet. The prospect of a big fee has led many a lawyer to shade the truth just a little in his opinions, and to give a slight twist to the law which he knows the courts would repudiate. But no such allurement could tempt Mr. Bardeen from the straight and narrow path. He utilized his knowledge and experience honestly and judgment and gave honest advice whether it gained him a fee or lost him a client.

This ingenuously he carried into court. There is an opinion, more or less prevalent, that he is the most successful, the most available and most desirable lawyer who wins the initial battle even if he has to put up an unscrupulous fight before justice and inferior courts. That is a great, often fatal mistake. It might be true if there were no appellate courts; but temporary success, won through chicanery, reacts with added disaster under the reversal of a court of last resort. The honest lawyer recognizes this and none more clearly than did our late Brother Bardeen. Courts respected his opinions, listened attentively to his arguments, and if their construction of the law differed from his, they knew that the exposition from which they dissented was honestly given.

Mr. Bardeen's views were broad and enlightened as to the dignity, scope and mission of his profession. In his practice he sought to bring it up to its highest possibilities of usefulness and to make it conserve the ends of justice. He dispensed all trickery. His word once given no one needed a written stipulation. He had little use for technicalities, and preferred that his case should stand upon its merits. Yet, for the sake of right and justice, he could stand unflinchingly upon his legal rights. An instance of this is still fresh in my memory.

In a hotly contested trial, some years ago, his antagonists were successful. Mr. Bardeen was convinced that the judgment was erroneous, and, although usually philosophical under defeat, he appeared to be dissatisfied and aggrieved by the result. At the close of the trial one of the opposing attorneys asked him to enter into a verbal agreement as to the point at issue, with a prompt and firm, though courteous refusal, emphasized with the remark "I shall stand on my legal rights now." His conclusions were justified by the result. The judgment was reversed on appeal.

In his character and disposition there was no taint of the mercenary. The getting of wealth through any business, however legitimate, was repulsive to him. He was a man of integrity to himself and to his dependents. He required that every man should build up his financial fortunes by all honorable means. But in the learned professions the dollar should not be the sole star, the accumulation of wealth should not be the primary purpose. Venality is dangerous. It always pure manhood. It blurs the moral perceptions. It undermines the integrity of the lawyer. It is worthy of his hire, the lawyer is deserving of his fee. But the broad gauge lawyer is content that the fee should be the incident, not the full plan and scope of life. He realizes that his profession for should be one of the great forces of civilization; that its members should be protectors of society, champions of the oppressed, vindicators of the law, instruments in the hands of justice to guard the home, the family and the state. This does not imply an undervaluation of the value of a lawyer's services. Such services, rightly performed, deserve and always will receive the highest remuneration. The wisest man who ever spoke made the material things of life subordinate to the spiritual character and growth, and said to his listening disciples "seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." One need not be strictly orthodox to accept that doctrine.

Eager strife for gain is not always rewarded with what it seeks. We have seen men, subordinating all other considerations, who, in the pursuit of gain, have lost the good they had, and, as Emerson says, "the adventure, after years of strife, has nothing broader than his own shoes." On the other hand we have seen men, standing ever for the right, giving precedence to the higher faculties, treading steadily in the path of duty, doing right for the sake of right, who have won competence without making it the primary object, and following this, as free gifts of Providence, there have come to them "honor, love, obedience, troops of friends."

Of this class was Charles V. Bardeen. No consideration could make him swerve from the line of duty. Few outside the profession realize the temptations that assail the practicing lawyer. Opportunities for fraud with practical impunity present themselves on every hand. And it should be set down to the lasting credit of the profession that the great majority of lawyers are true to their manhood, and in each hour, of their temptation pronounce that effect, "Hence, Satan," which always gives the victory over the subtle tempter.

Such men as Judge Bardeen should be kept to the front as examples to those just crossing the threshold of the profession. We may mark out our own lines of conduct, act independently and fearlessly according to the wisdom and strength vouchsafed us, but none of us can afford to disregard the example that should be set by a man who has gone before. So, in looking forward to our departed friend and brother, we do not violate to truth or propriety when we hold him up as an example upon which young lawyers may safely model their professional lives. He labored faithfully and bravely, his reputation extends wherever the decisions of one of the ablest jurists in the union are quoted, and of that court he was one of the brighest ornaments. His name, his fame, his genial presence, his qualities of head and heart are pleasant memories with us all. To me it is a melancholy pleasure to be able to pay tribute to his memory, and to say: "He is dead, but he lives in the hearts of those who knew him." And it is especially fitting that we, members of the bar, be so splendidly informed, should thus emphasize our grief at our own loss, while we share with the members of the profession throughout the state the sorrow which comes from the loss of a useful citizen, a genial friend, an honest man, a good lawyer and an upright judge.

TOCCERY FOR THE STEAMER.

The Mischief of the Incorporated—The Appropriate Track.

The following letter was received the first of the week from Helen Adair, New York, a writer on the fashions and styles of the day for women. It was written at Liverpool, England, after a trip across the Atlantic.

After a week's residence on the magnificent hotel, the harbor, the city, the people and the style of the day for women. It was written at Liverpool, England, after a trip across the Atlantic.

I could write a long chapter on what I saw and felt, but I will be brief and draw a veil over the chaff, the fun, the excitement and the adventures of our inexperienced sister, and alas, I saw many of them, knowing full well that our American woman's far famed adaptability will come to her rescue and she will never forget it again.

A woman naturally wishes to look her best during the week on shipboard when she is in constant attendance as at a hotel, but an elaborate wardrobe is out of place at sea, and only permissible on board the steamer, and again on landing, when the tailor-made woman may once more appear in soft silks and furbelows.

It is the tailor-made woman who wins laurels for her appropriate traveling costume. She is always trim, neat and smart. On shipboard her walking skirt escapes the deck. Her hat or cap fits snugly. A shirtwaist of severe cut worn under a stunning Forst's sweater, high shoes and a heavy "man's" glove for women, complete a costume comfortable, chic and becoming.

One of the most admired Forsythies I saw during the week on shipboard was a woman of white, hand-knit in cable design, the cable running from neck to waist-line forming the tapering French back and fastened down the slightly bloused front with crocheted loops and pearl buttons. A chic standing collar to be buttoned close or left open at the throat completed this stunning garment.

Nothing is more comfortable for a windy walk on deck than the long jacket which comes in varying weights of covert cloth, Scotch and English wools and cravenette. Among these cloths the cravenette is the most popular and no amount of dampness seems to dim or penetrate its glossy surface.

Equipped with the addition of rug and pillow, a soft cape for winter, a light wrap for spring, and a continental comfort garment for cooling hours in the tropics, a woman can cross the ocean comfortably, and with the happy assurance that she is looking her best.

"Under the Mistletoe" Please.

The home talent entertainment put on here last week by Miss Baker at the Armory, which was taken part in by 70 of the city's little Misses was a pronounced success, both from an artistic and financial point of view.

The Misses Margaret Holland and Fayne Barnes who took the part of the two lovers and Eva Hildebrand and Dot Barnes as the old married couple were simply perfect in their parts and elicited many words of praise. The little tots in the play were well drilled and very prettily costumed.

Miss Alice Lewis and Miss Olive McDonald presided at the piano. The entertainment was pleasing to the eye and held the large crowd of spectators from start to finish.

Question Answered.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for indigestion or biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of appendicitis, nervous prostration or heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and had with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. You can get this reliable remedy at J. J. Reardon's Drug Store. Prices 25c and 50c.

100 Acres Tract Sold.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL NEWS

The poverty dancing party given at Gilligan's hall last Thursday evening was attended by many young people and proved a success in every way. It was the first time an affair of this kind had been given here for a long period and it was amusing to note the many grotesque costumes in which some of the dancers were decked out. The music was furnished by Fredrickson's orchestra and was good. The party was in charge of Messrs. Ball, Markham and Vessey.

The services in the Baptist church last Sunday evening were attended by an audience which completely filled the edifice. Rev. Palmer baptised three and gave the hand of fellowship to three others. Rev. Engstrom gave the hand of fellowship to five in the Swedish language. The program was very interesting.

John T. Hagen of this city has taken out a license and embarked in the liquor business at Tripps. Jack has had plenty of experience in the liquor line and knows how to keep the trade. For several years he has conducted the only saloon at Woodboro.

Henry Wutker, the hustling Newbold land man and chairman of that town, was in the city during the early part of the week. Henry has had his hands full lately in the real estate business and has during the past month placed many settlers on his lands in the Town of Newbold.

Miss Mamie Lewis left this morning for the state of Washington to join her parents who are living near Seattle. The young lady has lived in this city for nearly a year attending High school. She made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Penny.

A number of cottages are in the course of construction at the lakes near Roosevelt. Among them is one being built by a well known Minneapolis physician, which when completed will cost several hundred dollars.

Miss Ida Vetting came home last Friday from Manitowish, where she spent a few weeks visiting relatives and friends.

Charles McIndoe went to Wausau this morning to see the fair and visit among relatives and friends for a few days.

Dan Moriarity of Eagle River is spending the week in the city.

Never Touched the Scotchman.

It is related of the late Shirley Brooks that he had at one time a very favorite pig who, alas, went the way of all pigs and was converted into bacon. Brooks sent some of the delicacy to a friend with a note as follows:

"His end was peace, and I send you a piece of his end."

The joke was related to a Scotchman, who laughed very heartily and shortly afterward having occasion to kill a pig of his own sent some to a relative, with the remark "His end was peace, and I send you a piece of the pig." And he wondered why nobody saw the joke—London King.

The Worst of It.

"Darker is not much on form," said the first commuter. "Why, the other day I saw him eating breakfast food for supper. And that wasn't the worst of it."

"What could be worse?" broke in the second commuter.

"Why, this," replied the first commuter, with a grin: "He actually had on evening dress at the time, with a morning glory in his buttonhole."

A New Doctrine.

The Rev. Dr. Forbush was making one of his pastoral calls at the Upjohn mansion.

Gray Hair
"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for over thirty years. It has kept my scalp free from dandruff and has prevented my hair from turning gray."—Mrs. F. A. Soole, Billings, Mont.
There is this peculiar thing about Ayer's Hair Vigor—it is a hair food, not a dye. Your hair does not suddenly turn black, look dead and lifeless. But gradually the old color comes back—all the rich, dark color it used to have. The hair stops falling, too. $1.00 a bottle. All druggists.
If your druggist cannot supply you, send us one dollar and we will express you a bottle. Be sure and give the name of your nearest express office. Address: J. C. AYER CO., Lowell, Mass.

SELF INDUCED AILMENTS.

The Folly of Neglecting the Habit of Not Feeling Well.

Few people realize that their ailments are largely self-induced, says O. S. Harnden in Success. They get into a habit of not feeling well. If they get up in the morning with a slight headache or some other trifling indisposition, instead of trying to rise above this condition they take a positive pleasure in capitulating upon their feelings to any one who will listen. Instead of combating the tendency to illness by filling the lungs with pure, fresh air they dose themselves with "headache tablets" or some other patent specific warranted to cure whatever ail they think they are suffering from. They begin to pity themselves and try to attract pity and sympathy from others. They begin to feel that they are not well, and they begin to feel that they are not well, and they begin to feel that they are not well.

There is greater danger that young girls who are delicate while growing up and lounge around the house and lead out of sorts will form a habit of invalidism when they reach maturity. How often do we see such girls "trace up" at once when anything happens which interests or excites them. An invitation to a reception or a ball or any other pleasant social function acts like a tonic. For the time being an instantaneous cure is effected. They are as well as anybody until after the entertainment.

Indolent mothers are frequently to blame for this physical and mental illness, for it is nothing more, on the part of their daughters, a lounge or sofa is a positive curse in many a home, because it is such a temptation to lie down and succumb to trifling suggestions of illness or the latest indisposition. A habit of sitting in whenever you "don't feel like it" is fatal to all achievement and ruinous to self discipline, self police and nobility and dignity of bearing.

THE AURORA BOREALIS.

A Spectacle That is Magnificent in Its Impressiveness.

It was a trifle past the afternoon of sunset, and the sun was a deep rich purple, with blue flowing swirls. The sky, a fine light turquoise blue at horizon, gradually deepened into a rich cobalt, in which a few stars twinkled. A majority of the men were absorbed in various occupations below when a call of enthusiasm brought all up on deck. At a point low on the southwest horizon a faint film had arisen, which quickly, silently assumed the form of a certain, waving and mounting upward in two stately columns past a group of finely shaped diatoms. In a few seconds it was across the zenith, displaying beautiful pale yellow, green and delicate pink and blue lights, with eddies at intervals of faint purple and red. The columns descended rapidly in ever varying spirals of perspective until the ardent gaze was bent behind the far northwest horizon.

We were about off the Danish port of Godthaab, Greenland, a sufficiently southern latitude at this season for the alternation of day and night, and as the heavens darkened the stars shone with increasing brightness through this great shimmering veil of light. The heavens and the sea grew darker and darker, and the aurora brighter and brighter in lightning changes of form and color, with the green and yellow and blue rays predominating and the delicate shaven from their aurora's light writhing in fiery serpent forms over the face of the moving waters. What impressiveness, what magnificence! It left the soul as in a spell. There was not much talking. Speechless as it was, I afterward witnessed across which produced a deeper impression, due doubtless to the presence of the long night of the far north—Century.

Arizona Sunbather.

To one who has been there, says Caspar W. Hodson in Sunset Magazine, the name Arizona, first of all, suggests sunshine and plenty of it. Nowhere on the globe is sunshine more abundant, more appreciated or more harmless. Indeed, a sunstroke has never been recorded in this territory. Though all good Arizonians have crossed the Hualapai river, which act according to tradition, directs one of the powers to tell the truth, I believe their records are accurate as to sunstroke. The explanation is found in the fact that heat is not so much a matter of thermometer as of humidity. The dry, hot air of the Arizona desert is invigorating to the fatigued. One can learn to love the desert. There the sunrises and sunsets are intensely beautiful and nowhere on earth richer in color. This is sometimes called Sunset Land. It might also be called Land of Sunshine—Sunset Magazine.

Toad and Not a Toad.

One of the queerest reptiles in the world is the Horned toad of Arizona. In the first place, though it is to be like a toad and is so called, it isn't a toad at all, but a lizard. It lives nowhere save in the desert and feeds on hard shelled beetles and other insects. One of the oddest things about the creature is its way of fighting. Two horned toads will meet and fight like bulls by butting, not apparently with any notion of killing each other, but each trying to turn its adversary over. The toad that is finally upset goes away humiliated and lifts himself.

Breeding Trouble.

Bertie—I don't want to go to bed yet, Ma. I want to see you and Mr. Shepherd play cards. Ladies—You wished I to think we should do such a thing? We never do. Bertie—But I heard mamma tell you to mind how you played your cards when Mr. Shepherd came!

Not charged.

"Pardon me," said the smiling customer, "but is this mineral water charged?" "Of any," replied the fair girl at the counter. "You pay the cashier."—Baltimore News.

No wonder.

She—My parrot says some awfully clever things. He—And who taught it to talk? She—Oh, I did.

A TEMPEST OF BATTLE.

Stirring Description of a Cavalry Charge at Gettysburg.

A cavalry charge met by a counter-charge of cavalry is still perhaps the most terrible spectacle witnessed in war. If the reader has never seen such a charge he can form little conception of its awe inspiring fury. Imagine yourself looking down from Gettysburg's heights upon the open, wide-sweeping plain below where 5,000 horses are marshaled in little lines, standing beside them are 5,000 riders, grimed, booted and spurred and ready to mount. The bugles sound the "Charge!" and instantly 5,000 plumes rise above the horses as the riders spring into their saddles. In front of the respective squadrons the daring leaders take their places. The fluttering pennants or streaming guidons, ten to each regiment, mark the left of the companies. On the opposite slope of the same plain are 5,000 hostile horsemen, also in different uniforms ready to meet these in countercharge. Under those 10,000 horses are their hoofs, iron-shod and pitiless, beneath whose furious tread the plain is soon to quiver. Again on each slope of the open field the bugles sound. Ten thousand sabers leap from scabbards and glister in the sun. The trained horses clasp their restraining bits, and as the bugles notes sound the charge their nostrils dilate and their flanks swell in sympathetic impulse with the dashing riders. "Forward!" shouts the commander. Down the line and through the columns in quick succession ring the coloring commands, "Forward, forward!" As this order thrills through eager ears sabers flash and spurs are planted in palpitating flanks. The madly dashing horses thunder across the trembling field, filling the air with clouds of dust and whizzing bullets. Their iron rimmed hoofs in remorseless tread crush the stones to powder and crash through the flesh and bones of hapless riders who chance to fall. As front against front these furious riders plunge their sweeping sabers slashing edge against edge, cutting a way through opposing ranks, gasping faces, breaking arms and splitting heads, it is a scene of wildest war, a whirling tempest of battle, short lived, but terrible.—General John H. Gordon in Scribner's.

HAPPY HITS.

Don't open a set of account books when you do a kindness for anybody. Advantages always look larger than disadvantages, even when the scales are balanced.

Don't marry money. You can spend the money, but you can't spend the trouble you may get with it.

Remember when a brother and sister quarrel it comes nearer to what a man and wife say than any other thing. Occasionally you know a man you can't help admiring, but who is such a fool that you want to beat him to death.

Sometime a scrambled egg rounds up as a failure. The egg didn't get the egg out whole, so the scrambled it. Some people make scrambled eggs of half they do.

When a man's folks are away and he goes to a restaurant to eat it seems pretty tough to pay 35 cents for a meal. At home he doesn't realize that he is paying anything.—Attelison Globe.

The Revolution in a Nutshell.

The following contribution to historic literature on the American Revolution was made by a little lady to a short story competition in a Philadelphia newspaper. The writer, a schoolgirl of ten years, epitomizes the whole Valley Forge experience in the following terse sentences: "There was a Revolutionary war. The British revolutionized Philadelphia. So Mr. Washington took a lot of soldiers to Valley Forge. Mr. Washington hadn't any thing for the soldiers to eat, so they had to go barefoot. Mr. Washington felt very bad, so he asked Benjamin Franklin. Benjamin Franklin felt bad, so he asked the King of France. The King of France sent a lot of soldiers, so we licked the British."

A Famous Bell.

One of the blindest bells in the world is in Cologne cathedral and is known as the "Glorious." It was cast from twenty-two French cannon captured in the Franco-Prussian war and was presented to the cathedral by the Kaiser. It bears the German arms and two far-reaching rays. One, in Latin, expresses the emperor's attitude for the divine mercy in granting him victory. The other, in German, declares: "I am the emperor. I took and I proclaim his glory. I fill and I pray heaven to grant peace and prosperity to the German empire."

Heelproot.

"Spare," said Patrick, rubbing his head with delight at the prospect of a present. "I always mean to do me good."

"I believe you," replied his employer, "and that's why I shall make you a present of all you have stolen from me during the year."

"Thank you, Lorner," replied Pat, "and may all your friends and acquaintances treat you as liberally."—London Telegraph.

Only the Third Stanzas.

Mattie had been unusually quiet at church one Sunday. She was generally a very restless listener. Her mother, noticing it, asked her: "What made you so good during service this morning, daughter?"

"I was thinking," answered the child, "only the people who write hymns always put something bad in them that the minister can't let the people sing. He always says 'omit the third' or some other stanza, and he says it over twice, so they'll be sure not to sing it, so it must be something wicked."—New York Times.

PLANT EVOLUTION.

Cultivation Has Done Wonders For Fruit and Vegetables.

There are few more wrongly named things in the world than the Jerusalem artichoke. In the first place it never came from Jerusalem at all. And in the second it is not really an artichoke, but a sunflower with tubers developed by cultivation.

Cultivation has done wonders for fruit and vegetables.

The instance, through its means, peaches, apricots and nectarines have been developed from the almond, to which family all three fruits belong.

There is little apparent connection between the wild crab of the hickories and a Newtown pignolia, but both are members of the same genus. Indeed, it is from this family will emerge the whole of the nut and existing varieties of apples have been raised.

Technically speaking, the pear is an apple, and so are the medlar and the mountain ash, which latter is not an ash at all.

Is a turnip a cabbage? Yes, one variety at least of it is. This is the green vegetable known as kohlrabi, which, although classed by scientists among the Brassicæ, or cabbage family, has huge roots just like a turnip.

The conium maculatum, a fruit and not a vegetable. The same remark applies to the tomato, which is really a fruit also.

The gooseberry is a currant. It is not the last like it in either appearance or flavor, yet both belong to the same family of Ribes.

The onion is a charming little flower, its various species bearing white, yellow, blue and rose colored blossoms, many produced in beautiful whorled clusters. Originally the onion was a flowering plant, but the cultivation of certain of its varieties has produced the now world famous vegetable.

When is a chestnut not a chestnut? When it is a horse chestnut. This is another of the curiosities of the classification of horticultural nomenclature. The horse chestnut is Aesculus, and the other kind Castanea—Stray Stories.

ANIMAL SWIMMERS.

The Squirrel is Very Swift and the Rabbit is Quite Adept.

Almost all animals know how to swim without having to learn it. As soon as they fall into the water crabs driven into it by instinctively make the proper motions and not only manage to keep afloat, but propel themselves without trouble.

Exceptions are the monkey, the camel, giraffe and llama, which cannot swim without assistance. Camels and llamas have to be helped across water, and giraffes and monkeys drown if they enter it. Now and then both of the latter species manage to cross waterways when they are driven to extremities, just as human beings occasionally can keep themselves afloat water through their fright.

A funny though able swimmer is the rabbit. He submerges his body with the exception of head and tail. The latter sticks away up into the air, and his hind legs make "scap scap" as he churms the water madly to get away. But with all his awkwardness he is a swift swimmer and is only beaten by the squirrel among the land animals.

The squirrel swims with his heavy tail sunk away down in the water and his head held high. He cleaves the waves like a duck, and a man in a row-boat has all he can do to keep abreast of the swimming squirrel.

One thing that none of the land living animals does is to dive. No matter how land pressed a swimming deer, rabbit, squirrel or other purely terrestrial animal may be it will remain above water. But the muskrat, beaver, be bear and other dive immediately.

The Lawyer's Rule.

"Ever since I began the practice of law," said a Detroit lawyer, who boasted that his name was suppressed, "I have made it a rule not to take cases in which I could not promise my client a percentage of gain over my fees. One day not long ago a business man came to me with a request to sue a doctor. I found it would cost far more than could be recovered and told him so. He was indignant and left vowing to get a lawyer to prosecute the case regardless of expenses.

"A few weeks later he came to me again. 'Well,' said he, 'I took your advice and saved $20 by it. Now, I want you to take charge of all legal matters affecting the bank corporation. Your retainer will be $20,000 per year.' I took it. It is needless to say."—Detroit News.
